William Jordan concentrates his practice on business litigation, government and internal investigations, False Claims Act cases, and corporate ethics and compliance matters for health care and technology companies. Bill leads the Health Care Industry Team, serves on the firm management committee, and formerly co-chaired the 200-lawyer Litigation & Trial Practice Group. He represents all participants in the health care industry—hospitals and health systems, pharmaceutical and life science companies, health IT and telehealth companies, long-term and post-acute care providers, labs and ancillary service providers, and managed care companies like PBMs and health insurers—in state, federal, and congressional investigations; litigation, arbitrations, and class actions; and compliance matters. Bill works with companies and their investors to understand their specific issues, whether advising a publicly traded company and its board, private equity sponsors or portfolio company, or privately held enterprise. Bill has served as an independent compliance monitor for a large multinational pharmaceutical company as part of its corporate integrity agreement with the HHS-OIG.

Bill returned to Alston & Bird following his service at the DOJ as senior counsel to the assistant attorney general for the DOJ's Civil Division and then as senior counsel to the associate attorney general of the U.S. He is ranked in Chambers USA for Health Care and White Collar and recognized since 2013 in The Best Lawyers in America® for Commercial Litigation.
