Wade Miller is a partner in Alston & Bird's Atlanta office and focuses her practice on health care litigation and regulatory compliance. Wade represents a broad array of health care clients including health plans, hospital systems, medical device manufacturers, post-acute providers, physician practices, and laboratories in government investigations, qui tam litigation, and complex civil litigation. Wade advises clients on health care regulatory matters including compliance, fraud and abuse, and self-disclosures to government regulators. Wade's practice also includes advising clients on the health care regulatory aspects of complex health care transactions. Wade is certified in health care compliance (CHC) and she has been recognized by Chambers USA for Healthcare in Georgia.

Representative Experience

- Independent review organization and outside reviewer involving reviewing a major pharmaceutical company's systems, policies, and procedures pursuant to the terms of company's corporate integrity agreement.
- Achieved dismissal with prejudice of a qui tam case filed against a hospital alleging that the hospital violated the False Claims Act by billing Medicare for services that were part of a clinical trial.
- Counsel to numerous hospitals and public health care and pharmaceutical companies in internal investigations, government enforcement actions, and qui tam litigation.
- Negotiated the favorable settlement of many investigations and terms of corporate integrity agreements, including the first to mandate the use of the case management protocol.
- Counsel to one of the nation's largest pharmacy benefits managers in several cases involving any-willing-provider laws. Obtained complete dismissal of claims in state appellate court and federal district court.
- Representing a managed care company in antitrust litigation involving allegations of price fixing and market monopolization.
- Conducted an internal investigation on behalf of the audit committee of a public company involving potential whistleblower claims. The SEC terminated its investigation without taking any enforcement action.
